

August 7, 2013

Greetings Everyone,

I want to take a moment to extend a hearty welcome as we move into the new academic year. With only seven days into the job as your new Chancellor, I have had the opportunity to hear and learn more about the challenges and opportunities that face our district. I am truly excited about going to the Chabot College campus for Convocation on Thursday, August 15, where we will have opportunities for further conversations and learn about each other.

As we continue to plan for our future, the operative word is "OUR." I believe we must have a shared vision of what we want to create. This vision, whatever that may be, is more than just a statement that we market to the public, put in our catalog, or onto our web pages. It is one that will get us through whatever awaits us; the vision should be one that is a touchstone; one that we rely on to get us through turbulent times and one that we are proud of as we all work towards the common good of our community and the students we serve.

Again, welcome back! I look forward to meeting you and working with you to make our vision a reality. As one of the newest members of the CLPCCD family, please stop by and say "Hi" during Convocation.
