Brian Copeland Brings The Waiting Period: Laughter in the Darkness to Las Positas College on November 2

(Livermore, CA) - Brian Copeland, host of The Brian Copeland Show on San Francisco's KGO, brings his one-man show, The Waiting Period: Laughter in the Darkness, to Las Positas' Mertes Center for the Arts on Thursday, November 2 at 7 p.m.

Copeland, who makes no excuses for his battle with debilitating bouts of depression, uses his wit and wisdom to give an unrelenting look at a 10-day period in his life: the mandatory waiting period before he could take home a gun he planned on using to take his own life.

Although the subject matter is dark, Copeland's dramatic talent and comedic skill help shed light on not only depression, but how the disorder has the ability to consume those it affects. And, even in his darkest of hours, he finds humor in his pain.

The extremely personal The Waiting Period: Laughter in the Darkness was written as a way for Copeland to tell his ultimately redemptive story and to help reach others who struggle with depression, including friends and family of those living with the disorder.

Called positively inspirational by the San Francisco Chronicle, The Waiting Period: Laughter in the Darkness also offers outsiders and insider's view through interviews with other sufferers, expanding the audience's understanding, and humanity, along the way.

"You can't walk away from The Waiting Period without being inspired, without being moved, without being changed," said Jeff Bell, a news anchor for KCBS and president of the Adversity 2 Advocacy Alliance. "My hope is as many people as possible see this very important play."
