LPC Mass Communications Hosts Virtual Media Symposium

(Livermore, CA) - As students get ready to start their distance learning school year, Las Positas College's Mass Communications Department announces the 2020 Press Pass Student Media Symposium, a virtual seminar and resource center. Press Pass is intended to encourage and bolster interest in media among local high school and college students through live seminars, interactions with media professionals via Q&As and tutorials, and peer networking opportunities.

Press Pass will begin a week of virtual workshops on Aug. 24, starting with keynote speaker Logan Murdock, staff writer at The Ringer. Press Pass will include live and recorded presentations from proven professionals - including Kavitha Davidson, host of Webby-winning podcast The Lead; Marcus Thompson II, sports columnists and author of national best-seller Golden: The Miraculous Rise of Steph Curry; and Squint, a celebrity photographer, visual storyteller and documentary producer.

All live seminars will be recorded and available to view on the website, www.PressPassSymposium.com.

This virtual symposium is perfect for students who are interested in media - especially those already participating in student media - and those with a curiosity for or talents that fit the industry. Students will get to pick the brains of professionals currently in the industry, practice some of the basics of modern journalism and learn the tricks of the trade in a supportive, media-forward environment.

The details about the seminars and the professionals who will be leading the workshops can be found on PressPassSymposium.com.
